Lecture 10 – Advanced Cost and Management Accounting

Strategic Management Accounting*

- Strategy – to accomplish a task, win against an opponent.
- Information for formulation and implementation of organization strategy.
- To develop an integrated framework of performance measurement that can be used to clarify, communicate and manage strategy.
- Strategic decisions usually involve the organization and have a significant effect on the organization.

Accounting in relation to strategic positioning

- There will be more emphasis on particular accounting techniques depending on the strategic position adopted.
- Tight cost controls are more appropriate where cost leadership strategy is followed.
- Manufacturing cost standards are likely to be less important for a firm following product differentiation strategy.

The Balanced Scorecard

- Product quality, delivery, reliability, after-sales service and customer satisfaction have become key competitive variables.
- None of these were given much importance measured by traditional management accounting performance measurement systems.
- The need to integrate financial and non-financial measures of performance and identify key performance indicators that link to strategy, led to the emergence of the balanced scorecard.

External information about competitors*

- To protect organization's strategic position and determine future strategies
- Help evaluate its competitive position relative to rest of industry.
- Collecting data on costs and prices, sales volumes and market shares, cash flows and resource availability for main competitors.
- Information available from public source i.e. annual reports, press, official institutions and information sources. (sales personnel, consultants, industry specialist)

Target costing and strategic management accounting

- Target costing falls within the domain of strategic management accounting.
- Justification for this is the external focus and the market-driven approach to product pricing and cost management.
- The aim is to achieve target cost, which involves examining cost reduction opportunities throughout the entire value chain.

Strategic positioning*

- A Firm has a choice of three generic strategies in order to achieve sustainable competitive advantage
  - Cost leadership – compete on the basis of lower selling prices. Advantage may be due to economies of scale, access to favorable raw material prices, superior technology.
  - Differentiation – superior and unique products. E.g. dependability of product, after sale service, wide availability.
  - Focus – on a narrow segment of the market that has special needs.

The Balanced Scorecard

- Attention is being given to encourage behavior that is consistent with organization's strategy.
- Development of an integrated framework of performance measurement that can be used to clarify, communicate and manage strategy implementation.
- The approach will attempt to integrate both financial and non-financial measures, and incorporate performance measurement within the strategic management process.
